

The Fall River Bridge on old Highway 7, near Maberly In Eastern Ontario.

Constructed during the winter of 1931/32, it was abandoned in the late 1950s when the highway was realigned.

2013

Off March Road, east of Almonte, Ontario.
2015

North of Kanata, Ontario, on March Road.
2014

Looking south from Mayfield Road, NW of Toronto.
2011

The Eagan Farm, an hour north-east of Toronto on the 4th Concession.
During the early years of WWII, my friends and I played in the hayloft of the barn that once stood on the ridge, just to the left of the driveway. 1990

The silo on an abandoned farm, about nine miles east of Newmarket, Ontario. This concrete silo, and the outhouse on Page 8, are the only intact structures. The machines that once harvested hay, wheat, oats, and barley lie rusted and useless. 2012

The grain seeder - on the same farm as the silo.
As for the house, only the basement remains – with a tree growing up through its broken concrete floor. (The photo I took of the basement tree didn't work.)

2012

Once a place of necessity,
now a relic. Missing door,
the end of privacy, the final indignity. The only wooden structure remaining on this abandoned farm.
2012

Log Cabin
County Road 49, west of Ottawa.
2001

Near Gambo, Newfoundland
Just visible from the Trans-Canada Highway.
1974

Near Arnprior, Ontario
1995

Highway 7, Ontario.

Heifer March Road, between Kanata and Almonte

East of Ottawa, Ontario
NO LEAD & SUPER NO LEAD

Hwy 7, East of Ottawa, Ontario

J. G. Porter
(By C. S. Henry)