

A modest collection of photographs, some of which are normal and some of which have been adjusted in Photoshop.

This, believe it or not, is a Cedar Waxwing.

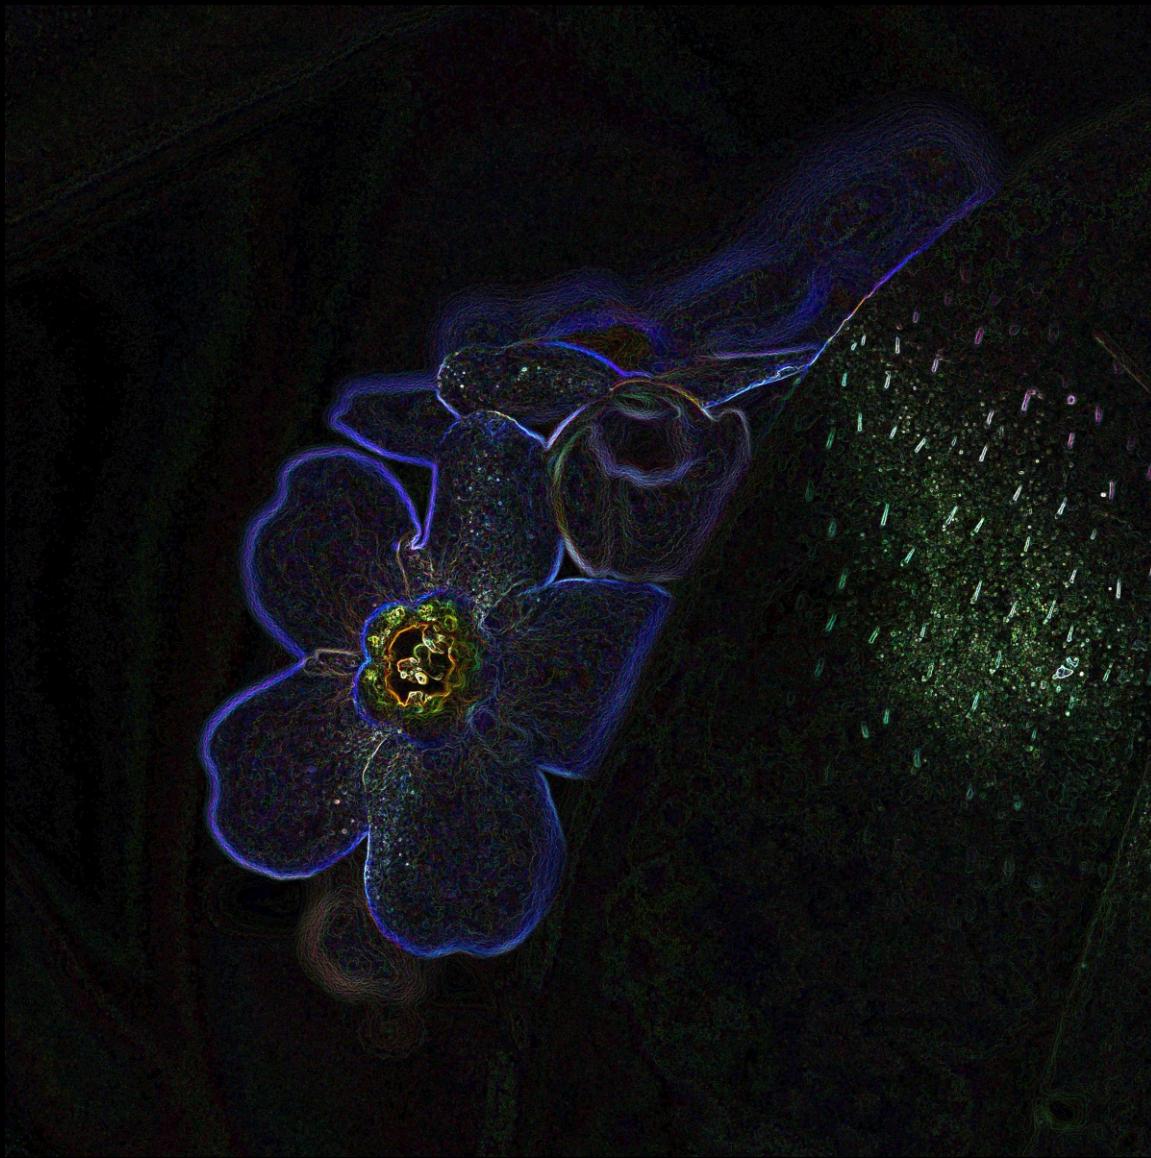

In late summer of 2011, I won a nine-month contract to write a dozen User Manuals for a company near Toronto that manufactures industrial X-Ray equipment. On several occasions, I took the train home to visit my family. On one such journey, I photographed this utility pole.

From 1947 to 1960, Jim and Jean Porter and their five children farmed near Keswick, a village of on the eastern shores of Lake Simcoe. These are late afternoon shots from the neighborhood.

Lake Simcoe and some ducks
